Dumas's Point of View at the Start and at the End of His Career Personal Jokes by Weber & Fields Wags The Busy Makers of Native Extravaganza.

Minnie Seligman is in a play at the Fifth Avenue Theatre that promised, eight or ten years ago, to take as forward a place in the repertory of the emotional actresses as "Camille." As Mrs. Eastl:k: Chapel in The Crust of Society" she has the character in which Mrs. Brown Potter was famous and in which a half dozen others acted at the same time. Among the various free translations of Dumas's "Demi Monde" were "The Crust of Society." "The Fringe of Society," "The Edge of Society" and "The Deception," all these titles except the last being endeavors to find an English equivalent for deminoude. The thing that strikes one in this play is the different point of view from which Dumas saw the same ubject at the beginning and at the end of his career. He was a young man when he wrote "La Dame aux Camelias," and he He was old when he wrote "La Demi Monde" and he drew a realistic, repellant picture of the woman who sins. Alhough far more shocking to watch, the evnical drama probably has done much less harm than the beautifully pathetic one. We weep for Camilly, forgetting that she had only herself to blame, and view papa Dural as a hateful Puritan because he takes a decent view of life. All considered we regard her as a pitifully maltreated reature, anobject of sympathy and almost an example to follow. Mrs. Chapel, on the ontrary, shows us sordid vice, and generally fills us with a feeling of satisfaction with the domestic fireside even though exstence there may be rather uneventful

But that the public wants to weep instead of reason is shown by the fact that, although equally good plays, "La Dame aux Camelias" is popular still even in its second half cen-ury, while "La Demi Monde," since its first uror, has been seen here only in occasional furor, has been seen here only in occasional revivals by cut-rate stc c companies. About four years ago Amelia Bingham used it with a summer organization at the old Harlem Columbus, and a season or so ago Elita Proctor Otis was brilliantly entertaining in it at the Murray Hill. Minnie Seligman is as good as either of these as the sordid adventuress, effective throughout in a violent manner, but note of these women. violent manner, but none of these women has displayed the subtlety that is required to fully embody Mrs. Eastlak Chapel.

The dialogue in "Twirly-Whirly" at Weber

& Fields's becomes more personal at every performance. The allusions to members of the company are usually made first at Tuesday matinées, when the actors in the audience are quick to appreciate the new points. Day before yesterday William Collier's conversation with Lillian Russell became a matter of personal recollection. When they were discussing their ideals Collier said, "Mine is a tall blonde-some nights. She looks very much like you, in fact enough like you to be an advertise-ment for those cigars you make." "I too have an ideal," said the queen of comic opera. "What do they look like?" asked Collier; and Marshall Wilder, in the third Collier; and Marshall Wilder, in the third row, laughed so that Collier interrupted the dialogue to ask him to stop. When Collier suggested to Lillian Russell that they tell their real names, she said that two years ago she was known as little Nellie Jackson. "Two years ago!" exclaimed Collier; "my, how you have spread out." When Miss Russell, who is really Nellie Leonard, called him Willie, he hushed her up for fear Louise (Mrs. Collier) might be listening in the wings. In the second act teases her about her jewels. On her head is a crown solidly set with diamonds. "Too had you have a headache," says Pete. "But I haven't," replies Russell. "Then what are you doing with all that cracked ice on your head." The self-termed "gay ice on your head." The self-termed "gay dog" seems to be able to rattle Charles Bigelow, but nothing disconcerts the fair Lillian, and occasionally she retaliates. There is line in which she mentions a great financier, "Russell Sage, for instance!" so financier, "Russell Sage, for instance! so that Pete can say, "Russell's age? I never discuss a lady's age in her presence." Perhaps the well-preserved beauty does not care for the joke. Anyway, at a matinée she changed the line to "J. P. Morgan, for instance," and for once the "gay dog" was unable to bark.

The American makers of extravaganzas are hard at work, although many have pieces that are already successful and simply waiting for New York openings. Before we have seen George Ade's first piece his second will have been staged. "The Sultan of Sulu" will be nearly a year old when it gets to Wallack's on the first Monday in the new year. Mr. Ade's latest work, which Henry Savage has put into rehearsal, is called "Peggy from Paris," but the first of its four scenes is in Hickory Creek, Ind. Its music is by William Loraine of "Salome" popularity, "The Prince of Pilsen" is still running in Boston, and a few weeks ago Gustave Luders, the composer, conducted the orchestra to mark the 150th performance at the Tremont. Mr. Luders and Frank Pixley, known to New York through "King Dodo," and "The Burgomaster," are at work on a musical free for Klaw & Erlanger, which we will see about the same time as "The Prince of Pilsen." R. A. Barnet, best known through "1492" and recently through "Miss Simrehearsal, is called "Peggy from Paris," "1492" and recently through "Miss Sim-plicity" and "The Show Girl," has finished a piece called "Baron Humbug" for production in Boston in February. Three have helped him in writing the verses. Three men Mrs. Robert Osborn is too good a business

Mrs. Robert Osborn is too good a business woman to open her theatre with only "Tommy Rot" in view. Although she is confident of success, she has accepted two farces from which to choose a successor in case of failure. One has music by the composer of "Tommy Rot." Safford Waters, and is named "The Echo Girl." The other is "Captain Careless." by R. Melville Baker, who dramatized the Foxy Grandpa pictures for Joseph Hart. Jöseph Herbert is making some alterations in Rupert is making some alterations in Rupert Hughes's book of "Tommy Rot," which is said to be clever, but rather amateurish in places. Reginald De Koven is talking of building and managing a theatre, and from his sketched plans he evidently means house somewhat like Mr. Osborn's About 1985 and 198 house somewhat like Mr. Osborn's. At the De Koven Theatre only American comic and light opera will be sung, one piece a year by the composer of "Robin Hood" and one or two from outsiders.

George W. Lederer is busy finding material for two stars that he will send out before the new year. He has three librettos for James T. Powers and in a few days he will decide which to use. When that is settled he will put Ludwig Englander to work immediately on the score. For Virginia Earl he has a French play, now being adapted for this country. In the meanadapted for this country. In the mean-ime he is trying to find a theatre for "Sally in Our Alley," when it is driven from the Broadway next month. Clay M. Greene has finished Americanizing "The Silver Silipped," which will follow "Sally." Revarsals are well under way, with two stage rectors Trom England repeating in the overnents of the chorus the elaborate onden production. Charles and Emanuel ein's "Mr Pickwick," with De Wolf Hopper the principal rôle, has made such a fine start on the road that it is bound to get into New York sooner or later.

CLEAN UP THE TENDERLOIN. | 3 HELD FOR CRAFT MURDER Capt. Walsh Says That's His Intention-"A Thankless Jeb," Says Sheehan.

"Smiling Dick" Walsh, the new commander of the Tenderloin, walked into the famous old police station a few minutes before 8 o'clock yesterday morning and signed his name on the blotter. With that formality over he took charge of the precinct. He was busy most of the day getting his effects into shape and getting ac quainted with the patrolmen who will do

Capt. Walsh turned the men out at each roll call and told them he expected them to do police duty. If they shirked their work he told them he would be after them with a sharp stick. Capt. Walsh, in talking to reporters, said that it was his intention to do things quietly and to clean up the district where it needed

Sheehan took command of the Old Slip station last night in cheerful mood. He told the outgoing squad that he ex-pected them to be "men and gentlemen." Then he came around the desk rail and told by Capt. Walsh. Louis Lues, a policeman who has been attached to the Tenderloin station for several years, did not show up at the station at 7 o'clock last night when he was due to go out with the theatre squad. After waiting for him an hour Sergt. Sweeney sent a man to his home. Lues was found there and told to come to the station.

"Where have you been?" asked the sergeant, an hour later when Lues appeared.

Home," was the answer. "Didn't you know you were due here?"
was asked. "Sure," said the cop, "here's my shield, ve had enough, and I'm done." Lues walked out, leaving his shield on

NO IMMUNITY FOR M'ENEANES IN HEAD-CHOPPING CASE.

"Jack" Tobin, the New Witness, Tells How Chinese Cook Was Made to Open Closet Where Knives Were Mamle Turner's Last Sight of "Capt. Jim."

A Coroner's jury decided yesterday that James B. Craft of Glen Cove, L. I. who was murdered early Saturday morning, Sept. 27, in the Empire Café at 38 West Twenty-ninth street, came to his death "from a fracture of the skull, cerebra hemorrhage and decapitation of the sixth and seventh spinal vertebræ, caused by violence at the hands of Thomas Tobin. Alexander McEneaney and Robert Kelly." Coroner Jackson committed the three men to the Tombs without bail, pending the action of the Grand Jury. Thomas Tobin, also called "Butch" Tobin, bad charge of the cafe at night and also acted as waiter; Alexander McEneaney (as he spells his name in a statement to the Coroner), was the bartender and notified the police of the murder, and Robert Kelly was the porter. Kelly, according to the police, is a brother of "Butch" Tobin.

Police Captain Sheehan and Policemen Ziegler, Coxe, Converse and Daly told what they knew of the murder, as has already been reported in THE SUN ready been reported in THE SUN.

Dr. Adolph Vankowsky, a druggist at 521 Sixth avenue, testified that "Jack" Kelly and Mamie Turner called at his store on the morning of Sept. 27 and bought a bottle of patent medicine.

REAR ADMIRAL JOUETT DEAD. His Record During the Civil War Was Brilliant One.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1. The Navy Department has been advised of the death of Rear Admiral James E. Jouett, U.S. N. at his summer home. The Anchorage, Sandy Spring, Md.

Admiral Jouett was a Kentuckian, and for many gallant acts in the Civil War received a vote of thanks from Congress. He had a picturesque career as a naval officer and was famous for his bluff, hearty manner, which made him one of the most popular men in the navy and in Washington generally.

Until very recently Admiral Jouett has been strong and well, his physical condition being remarkable for a man of his age-74 years. He loved good horses and has in recent years and until a few weeks ago, enjoyed nothing so much as fox hunting by day and coon hunting by night with his farmer friends of the Sandy Spring neighborhood, nearly all of whom are

Quakers. Admiral Jouett was born in Kentucky Feb 27, 1828, and was appointed to the navy from that State on Sept. 10, 1841. When the Civil War began Admiral Jouett, then a L'eutenant, was assigned to the frigate Santee of the West Gulf blockading squadron. On Nov. 7, 1861, he commanded a party of men from that vessel, who boarded and destroyed the Confederate warship Royal Yacht in Galveston Bay In a desperate hand to hand struggle with the commander of the Royal Yacht, Jouett received severe wounds in the right arm and the right side and lung. These wounds were inflicted by a Confederate sailor who came to the assistance of his commander. For this act t evement Jouett received the thanks of the Navy Department.

In the battle of Mobile Bay he commanded the Metacomet, which was lashed to the side of Farragut's flags'tip, the Hartford, and passed the forts with her Here is what Farragut says of Jouett in that action:

Rear Admiral Jouett was retired from active service for age on Feb. 27, 1890, his sixty-second birthday.

The funeral of Admiral Jouett will take place from the residence of Col. James M. Morgan in this city on Friday morning. The interment will be in the Arlington National Cemetery. Marines and blue-jackets will form the funeral escort.

Sunday and the body will be buried in Mottmartre Cemetery. The postponement was the result of the Government's decision to take part in the services.

In deference to M. Zola's often-expressed wish, his funeral will be devoid of all reigious character. In addition to the Minister of Public Education, the presidents of he Sociétié des Gens de Lettres and the Sociétie des Auteurs Dramatiques will also speak. The final oration will be delivered by one of Zola's friends, possibly Anatole France, the poet and littérateur.

Unless M. Zola's will, which will be opened to-morrow, expressly forbids it, military honors for an officer of the Legion of Honor will be rendered.

GERMANY TAKES UP TRUSTS. To Bring Representatives of Combinations and Consumers Together.

pecial Cable Desputch to THE SUN BERLIN, Oct. 1 - The Customs Tariff ommittee of the Reichstag to-day decided to maintain its previous decision in regard to the imposition of minimum duties on cattle. The Government has opposed minimum duties, which, they argued, would create fresh difficulties for the commerical policy of Germany.

Count Posadowsky-Wehner, Prussian Secretary of State for the Interior, in the course of a speech announcing that a Govvernment inquiry was being made into the trust, syndicate and cartel systems in Germany, said the investigation had shown that there were over four hundred cartels in Germany. It was intended he said, to bring the representatives of these cartels and of the consumers face

A further subject of the inquiry, Count Posadowsky-Wehner said, would be the effect of trusts on periods of prosperity and depression. While he thought every Government should give the greatest attention to trusts, and while Germany would make regulations in tregard to this matter. the full and permanent control of trusts was not acceptable to the Government He added that the Government was doing all in its power to protect German industries, especially those engaged in working up raw material, against foreign trusts.

JEWISH NEW YEAR OPENS TO-DAY It is $603 to the Hebrey Calendar-Not True That Zola Will Be Prayed For. Rosh Hashonah, the festival of the Jewish New Year., was ushered in at sunset last evening and will continue until sunset o-morrow evening. This is known as the Feast of the Trumpets. It will be observed throughout the world by all Jews whether they be orthodox, reform or liberal. By the Jewish calendar it is the beginning of the year 5663.

In all parts of the city last night the festival was noticeable for the number of stores closed. Among the Jews all business was suspended and will not be re-sumed until the festival ends to-morrow evening. A report to the effect that prayers would be said in the synagogues to-day to commemorate Emile Zola was denied by those who ought to know. They said that such a thing was impossible

NEGROES SENT AWAY. Lebanon Strike Breakers Leave and the Military Goes Away.

LERINON, Pa., Oct. 1. Col. C. M. Clement and the Second Battalion of the Twelfth EMPIRE Regiment, this afternoon, left on their return to Shenandoah after being here eight days to preserve order and protect life and property. General Manager James Lord of CRITLRION THEATRE, Broadway & 44th St. American Iron and Steel Manufacturing Company this morning called on Col Tement, and said that in view of the public opposition to the employment of the colored opposition men they had been discharged and sent last night to Pittsburg. He saw no need for further protection by the troops, as the news that the negroes had reall gone during the night was received this morning with feelings of relief.
